Why You Should Vote for Me—Idara Danison

I am running for Postgraduate Officer because I believe every postgraduate deserves an advocate who treats their challenges with the seriousness of national duty. My motivation comes from lived experience: as an international postgraduate student, I know the weight of balancing research, deadlines, financial pressure, and the search for belonging in a new environment. I refuse to stand by while others carry these same burdens in silence.

I want to make postgraduate life at Wrexham not only bearable, but inspiring. That means fighting for clearer supervision and feedback, ensuring that wellbeing and mental health services are truly accessible, and unlocking funding opportunities so that research and professional ambitions are not cut short by lack of resources. It also means creating a genuine postgraduate community where no one feels invisible, whether they are taught, research, part-time, or international.

What makes me ready for this role is not only my determination, but my ability to lead with empathy, to listen with respect, and to act with clarity. I am approachable, I am persuasive, and I am relentless in seeking solutions. If you entrust me with your vote, I will dedicate my voice and my energy to making postgraduate life stronger, fairer, and more united.
